

Legal Aspects of Transportation

ABOUT

The workshop will introduce transportation professionals to a number of legal aspects associated with transportation, design, construction, operations and safety. The course will provide an overview of basic legal terms and concepts including discretionary immunity. Workshop participants will learn about managing exposure to liability, and also preparation for depositions. The workshop will also touch on how to manage risks associated with traffic control device innovation. Workshop instructors include legal and transportation professionals.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the completion of the course, participants will have an increased understanding of:

- Basic legal terminology applicable to transportation: design, construction, operations and safety
- Oregon's Discretionary Immunity and the importance of adhering to agency and national regulations and procedures
- Suggested best practices for decision management and documentation to reduce liability exposure
- Considerations for managing risks of innovation
- Suggestions for preparing for a deposition
